Creating an Accessible Space

We recently reopened our permanent collection at the Georgia Museum of Art with some significant changes. Works of art are grouped to help viewers make comparisons, we created more intimate viewing areas, and large labels add context and clarity to the works around them. Terms are defined on labels and written gallery guides will give visitors more access to themes and information in the collection. These materials will also be available in Spanish. Accessibility is a critical part of these galleries, and this concept was on our minds as we planned this reinstallation.

Not only do we want our museums to be used by as many visitors as possible, but we also want everyone to feel comfortable and included in our spaces by anticipating their needs as best we can. This idea is supported through universal design, “the design of products and environments to be used by all people, to the greatest extent possible, without the need for adaptation or specialized design” (Center for Universal Design, North Carolina State University).

For example, when paths in the galleries are wide and open instead of cluttered with objects, it helps audiences in wheelchairs, those with strollers, large groups of students, and visitors with service animals walk through the rooms more easily. It also allows security guards to better see and protect people and objects. In another example, tactile components can help not only visitors with visual disabilities engage with works of art, but assist all visitors in better understanding aspects such as texture and forms. Creating spaces that are flexible and intuitive and information that can be easily read and understood are important goals for all museums to be as inclusive as possible.

I anticipate more of these discussions as we prepare for the GAMG annual meeting in Augusta, January 18-20. The sessions our vice president, Jose Santamaria, has lined up and the events and trips that Michelle Schulte and her host committee have organized in Augusta will make this a memorable conference. I look forward to seeing you there.

All the best,
Carissa DiCindio, PhD
Curator of Education, Georgia Museum of Art
President, Georgia Association of Museums and Galleries
Augusta, site of the 2017 GAMG Conference, is known as Georgia's Garden City, and is nestled on the banks of the Savannah River. It features a blend of city fun, arts and culture, shopping and fine cuisine, but is also a historic city with a multitude of museums and cultural offerings. GAMG Program Chair Jose Santamaria and Michelle Schulte and her Augusta local arrangements committee have put together an outstanding schedule of conference activities. The conference will start on Wednesday, January 18, with an offering of tours and workshops. Attendees can choose from a visit to nearby Edgefield, SC, to learn about its historic pottery tradition, which includes Dave the Potter, a walking tour of Augusta’s “Hill” community, or a trip to nearby Thomson, Georgia, to visit Hickory Hill, Tom Watson's Birthplace, as well as McDuffie Arts Council, the Rock House, and White Hill Herbs. In addition, morning and afternoon workshops will take place on Wednesday, followed by the traditional Progressive Dinner. Stops include the Byrd Gallery at Augusta University, Lucy Craft Laney Museum of Black History, Augusta Museum of History, partnering with Historic Augusta, and the Imperial Theater.

Sesssions on Wednesday and Thursday will cover numerous topics, including Volunteer Recruitment and Retention, Museum Leadership, Low Cost Publishing Ideas, Understanding the New Federal Overtime Regulations, Attracting Diverse Audiences, and much more. Visit our website, www.gamg.org to view the entire program. Supporting the conference theme of “Opening Doors: Inclusion and Diversity in the 21st Century Museum,” Dr. Valerie Babb, Director of the Institute of African American Studies at the University of Georgia, will present the Keynote Speech.

Mark your calendar today for January 18-20, 2017 and plan to join your colleagues in Augusta for an educational and informative conference. The Historic Partridge Inn will serve as the Host Hotel and sessions will be held primarily on the Augusta University campus. The Partridge Inn is offering a special conference rate of $119 plus tax and reservations can be made by calling 706-737-8888 and providing the Group Code SMERF.

NEWS YOU CAN USE
A new tool [http://mcs.smu.edu/dashboard/] from the National Center for Arts Research [http://mcs.smu.edu/artsresearch/] (NCAR) facilitates the comparison of financial and operating performance data among cultural organizations. The Dashboard draws data from DataArts [http://culturaldata.org/] and benchmarks performance among arts organizations of similar types and sizes.

When studying performance data, there are a lot of components that need to be considered, and it can be difficult to know exactly where to look and what factors to consider. The format of a Dashboard that NCAR has used to present this data breaks down the data into nine general areas and this way arts managers can get a quick snapshot impression of how they compare against their peers.

Registration is now open for the SEMC 2016 Annual Meeting, which will be held October 10 - 12 in Charlotte. Visit www.semcdirect.net to register. The keynote speaker will be Elizabeth Merritt, Director of the American Alliance of Museums' Center for the Future of Museums.

The Southeastern Museums Conference (SEMC) proudly announces the 17th annual Jekyll Island Management Institute (JIMI 2017). Scheduled for January 17 - 24, 2017, JIMI is specifically designed for administrators from new and emerging museums and for museum professionals with subject area expertise desiring knowledge of general museum administration and operations. The deadline for JIMI 2017 applications is October 28, 2016. You will find more information about JIMI 2017 program, scholarships, and application at www.SEMCdirect.net.

Myrna Anderson-Fuller and Hank Kimmel have been named as co-chairs of ArtsGeorgia's new statewide Advisory Council. They are experienced leaders in the non-profit sector and knowledgeable about arts issues. The Council's members represent every region of the state, different types of arts organizations, and they are a cross section of the arts in our state. The Advisory Council's priorities will be to recommend new programs and projects, participate in arts advocacy activities, and advise ArtsGeorgia's board on creative ideas and new ways to provide funding, resources and support for the arts.

Information about members of the Advisory Council, a report of their July meeting and an announcement of their plans will be reported in a future issue of the ArtsGeorgia's upcoming eNewsletter.

SPACEFINDER GEORGIA OFFERS COMMUNITY DIRECTORIES

ArtsGeorgia, C4 Atlanta and Fractured Atlas who launched the program in January are now promoting the 2nd phase of SpaceFinder Georgia. Local arts councils and community arts centers can return the pre-addressed, pre-stamped post card in the letter they recently received to inquire about a community directory or they can email ArtsGeorgia for one of the post cards.

Local arts councils and communities in Georgia can create Community Directories on SpaceFinder. This new feature is a custom-branded SpaceFinder Georgia landing page for spaces relevant to specific communities. Community Directories are a collaborative and affordable way to build a diverse audience of renters, and help local arts spaces better market themselves within your community. Information and contact on SpaceFinder Georgia under Community Partnerships at artsgeorgia.us.

Fractured Atlas, C4 Atlanta and ArtsGeorgia developed the site so Georgia is one of only four states with a statewide version of SpaceFinder and to date there are over 300 listings on SpaceFinder Georgia. Fractured Atlas, C4 Atlanta & ArtsGeorgia developed and launched the 1st phase of the statewide resource in January.
